

Hatch Discussion Guides suggest questions and exercises to promote critical thinking around media literacy, digital citizenship, and social issues. Rather than impose specific points of view, the guides are designed to provide parents and educators the tools to facilitate discussions on complex issues.

I HAVE A DREAM WORKSHOP

<http://www.sheknows.com/parenting/articles/1069699/martin-luther-king-jrs-i-have-a-dream-speech-inspires-kids-to-this-day>

Workshop Mission:

To give kids an understanding and appreciation of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s, "I Have a Dream" speech and its importance today.

Activity Guide:

- Have your child or student read and highlight their favorite passages of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s, "I Have a Dream" speech delivered on August 28, 1963. [Included in discussion guide.]
- Watch the speech together and have your child or student read along.
- Encourage your child to create their own "I Have a Dream" speech using our fill-in-the-blanks activity sheet. [Included in this discussion guide.]

Speech and Glossary:

"I HAVE A DREAM"

Author: Martin Luther King, Jr.
August 28, 1963

I am happy to join with you today in what will go down in history as the greatest demonstration for freedom in the history of our nation.

Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon light of hope to millions of Negro slaves who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of their captivity.

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

But one hundred years later, the Negro still is not free. One hundred years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination. One hundred years later, the Negro lives on a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity. One hundred years later, the Negro is still languishing in the corners of American society and finds himself an exile in his own land. So we have come here today to dramatize a shameful condition.

In a sense we have come to our nation's capital to cash a check. When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir. This note was a promise that all men, yes, black men as well as white men, would be guaranteed the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note insofar as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check, a check which has come back marked "insufficient funds." But we refuse to believe that the bank of justice is bankrupt. We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. So we have come to cash this check -- a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice. We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make real the promises of democracy. Now is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice. Now is the time to lift our nation from the quick sands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood. Now is the time to make justice a reality for all of God's children.

It would be fatal for the nation to overlook the urgency of the moment. This sweltering summer of the Negro's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating autumn of freedom and equality. Nineteen sixty-three is not an end, but a beginning. Those who hope that the Negro needed to blow off steam and will now be content will have a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual. There will be neither rest nor tranquility in America until the Negro is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

But there is something that I must say to my people who stand on the warm threshold which leads into the palace of justice. In the process of gaining our rightful place we must not be guilty of wrongful deeds. Let us not seek to satisfy our thirst for freedom by drinking from the cup of bitterness and hatred.

We must forever conduct our struggle on the high plane of dignity and discipline. We must not allow our creative protest to degenerate into physical violence. Again and again we must rise to the majestic heights of meeting physical force with soul force. The marvelous new militancy which has engulfed the Negro community must not lead us to a distrust of all white people, for many of our white brothers, as evidenced by their presence here today, have come to realize that their destiny is tied up with our destiny. They have come to realize that their freedom is inextricably bound to our freedom. We cannot walk alone.

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

As we walk, we must make the pledge that we shall always march ahead. We cannot turn back. There are those who are asking the devotees of civil rights, "When will you be satisfied?" We can never be satisfied as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable horrors of police brutality. We can never be satisfied, as long as our bodies, heavy with the fatigue of travel, cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities. We cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro's basic mobility is from a smaller ghetto to a larger one. We can never be satisfied as long as our children are stripped of their selfhood and robbed of their dignity by signs stating "For Whites Only". We cannot be satisfied as long as a Negro in Mississippi cannot vote and a Negro in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote. No, no, we are not satisfied, and we will not be satisfied until justice rolls down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.

I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of great trials and tribulations. Some of you have come fresh from narrow jail cells. Some of you have come from areas where your quest for freedom left you battered by the storms of persecution and staggered by the winds of police brutality. You have been the veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive.

Go back to Mississippi, go back to Alabama, go back to South Carolina, go back to Georgia, go back to Louisiana, go back to the slums and ghettos of our northern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed. Let us not wallow in the valley of despair.

I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day, down in Alabama, with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification; one day right there in Alabama, little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers.

I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plain, and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.

This is our hope. This is the faith that I go back to the South with. With this faith we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope. With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing that we will be free one day.

This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with a new meaning, "My country, 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my fathers died, land of the pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring."

And if America is to be a great nation this must become true. So let freedom ring from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire. Let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York. Let freedom ring from the heightening Alleghenies of Pennsylvania!

Let freedom ring from the snowcapped Rockies of Colorado!

Let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California!

But not only that; let freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia!

Let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain of Tennessee!

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

Let freedom ring from every hill and molehill of Mississippi. From every mountainside, let freedom ring.

And when this happens, when we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual, "Free at last! free at last! thank God Almighty, we are free at last!"

"I HAVE A DREAM" CONTEXT

"Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.: Predominant leader in the Civil Rights Movements to end racial segregation and discrimination in American during the 1950s and 1960s and the leading spokesperson for nonviolent methods for achieving social change." Source: [HistoryNet.Com]

1963 "I have a Dream Speech": On August 28th 1963, Dr. King delivered his most famous speech from the steps of the Abraham Lincoln Memorial. The speech called not only for African-American rights, but also for the rights of all people, and moreover, for friendship and unity among all Americans. [Source: <http://www.historynet.com/martin-luther-king-jr>]

Emancipation Proclamation: issued Jan 1st, 1863, the proclamation announced to the Confederacy and the world that the abolition of slavery had become an important goal of the North in its fights against the rebellious states of the South. 1 The 13th amendment of the Constitution, ratified in 1864, outlawed slavery. Source: [Encyclopedia.Com]

"I HAVE A DREAM" GLOSSARY

Momentous: of great importance or consequence

Beacon: a person or thing that illuminates and inspires

Manacle: a hand shackle

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

Declaration of Independence: adopted on July 4th 1776, proclaimed the original 13 American colonies independent of Great Britain.

Constitution: body of rules, formal or informal, which regulates the government of a state.

Promissory: containing or implying a promise

Gradualism: the principle of achieving some goal by gradual steps

Democracy: government in which the supreme power is vested in the people

Sweltering: suffering, oppressive heat

Invigorating: full of life and energy

Inextricable: incapable of being untangled, loosed or solved

Civil rights: personal liberties that belong to an individual, owing to his or her status as a citizen or resident of a particular country or community.

Voting Rights Act of 1965: federal law that seeks to prevent voting discrimination based on race, color or membership in a language minority group. In 1965, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., led a group of civil rights supporters on a march to Selma, Alabama, to demand voting rights.

[Definition Sources: Dictionary.com]

Create your own speech / Fill-in-the-blank activity:

“I HAVE A DREAM”

Author: Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. + _____

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

2 score and 11 years ago, a great American, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., in whose shadow we stand today, gave his "I Have a Dream" speech. It was a great beacon of hope to millions of people. We've made great progress since then. Today we/I can:

_____ ,
(Something someone can do today that they couldn't do due to racism or segregation in the 60s)

_____ ,
(Something someone can do today that they couldn't do due to racism or segregation in the 60s)

And _____ .
(Something someone can do today that they couldn't do due to racism or segregation in the 60s)

These are things that would not be possible without Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the civil rights movement. But more than 50 years later, his dream is not fully realized. I say to you today, my friends, even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all _____ are created equal."

I have a dream that my children/family will one-day _____ ,
(List 3 hopes you have for future generations)

_____ and _____ .

This is my hope.

And if America is to be a great nation this must become true.

Let freedom ring from the streets of _____ to the hill tops of _____ (City you were born in)

HATCH DISCUSSION GUIDE

_____!
(City or state that is very far from the city you were born in)

This is MY dream.