

Great places for mothers to connect online

WE'VE TOLD YOU ABOUT momslikeme.com and other advice and social destination sites for moms. In her newest book, The Hot Mom's Handbook, Jessica Denay, a leading "mom" expert, passes along other useful blogs. Among them:

Momversation.com.

Real, everyday mothers, including guest contributors and bloggers, weigh in on tough questions like

"How did you get your pre-pregnancy body back?" in video format.

ParentsConnect.com.

It covers everything from pregnancy to product and toy reviews and family travel. The site allows parents to connect with others across the country with its "today's events" feature, which details family-friendly events happening daily across the nation.

SheKnows.com. This is an all-inclusive site that features lifestyle, love and health information along with its parenting tips. Its "how to" section answers questions about technology, food and beauty, to name a few.

SocialMoms.com. This site connects moms who use their Twitter accounts. The "community" section includes forum discussions, detailed listings of online mom groups and related blogs. □ — Katie Crowe
